At the beginning of 2023, the City of Chicago, Cook County, and six Chicago metropolitan counties joined to announce the first-ever regional and multi-jurisdictional partnership for economic development: The Greater Chicagoland Economic Partnership. By working together, the goal is to elevate Chicago's global competitiveness while ensuring robust, equitable economic growth by leveraging the region's collective assets: talent, infrastructure, industry, and innovation.

Quantum technology is an example of innovation driving regional growth. Illinois receives 40% of all federal dollars for this technology and boasts 4 of the nation's top 10 quantum centers. Chicago has the country's largest quantum network and an ecosystem to support the industry's growth. By using fundamentally different technology than conventional computers, quantum provides computing power a trillion times more powerful than supercomputers – and will upend entire industries such as finance, healthcare, and cybersecurity.
